- Program structure
- Essential thematic areas

In the program structure, three plenary meetings have been decided as central afternoon events (see below). The program group is responsible for the opening, closing, strategy consultation and the plenaries. The central plenaries will each be preceded by workshops for introduction and followed by workshops for conclusion.

Opening event: Global change - where to?

Closing event: How we want to live - perspectives for a better world

Strategy consultation: How and with whom do we change this world?

The aim is to make ESU a participatory university. The formats of the events should reflect the diversity of the social movements. Opening and closing sessions will probably be classic panel discussions because of the compact participation with simultaneous translation.

The nine forums from the previous version, assigned to our essential topics, are replaced here by the three central plenary events and two forums on each of three days (i.e. a total of nine central events again).

The following central thematic areas (guidelines, here in keywords) have been defined as essential:

1. democracy, danger or far right
2. gender relations, feminism
3. war, peace, détente
4. economic crisis, criticism of financial markets
5. climate, environment and socio-ecological transformation, system change
6. housing
7. mobility
8. corona, health
9. flight and migration - against racism, exclusion, and discrimination
10. upheavals in the world of labour
11. trade and corporate power: trade deals, ISDS, corporate accountability
